CIC Conseil advises the shareholders of Kingspark on a BIMBO transaction

CIC Conseil has advised the shareholders of Kingspark, a company specialising in the operation and management of private parking zones, on a BIMBO (Buy-In Management Buy-Out) transaction. The operation was led by individual buyer David Juhel, alongside the company's current manager, Franck Mothes.

Renowned for its expertise and know-how in operating private parking facilities, Kingspark has established itself since its inception in 2010 as a key player in parking management for the healthcare sector. The company controls the entire value chain (design of access systems and operational management) and manages around forty car parks across France under multi-year contracts.

Following a competitive process, David Juhel - who brings proven experience in the building control sector, having served as director of Elibat for over 15 years - successfully convinced Franck Mothes and Kingspark's other shareholders of his ability to guide the company through its next growth phase, while leveraging the existing teams.

The objective is to accelerate Kingspark's business growth, both by diversifying its client portfolio and through external growth operations. He will be able to rely on the technical and operational expertise of Franck Mothes, who will support him during this new cycle.

CIC Conseil acted as the exclusive financial advisor to Kingspark's shareholders throughout this transaction.
